Dear Mr Gilbert-Smith,

Enclosed is a pre-publication copy of Rich Man Poor Man for your consideration. If there is anything I have written concerning the Gilbert-Smith family that is factually incorrect, please inform me and I promise to make the necessary correction/s. Your father weaves in and out of the story at numerous places, so I thought it prudent to send the whole script for the purpose of context. As you read the book, you will see that you become a main character in the storyline, after in my opinion you unwittingly allowed your brother to use you as a STOOGE during the 2010 trial.

Mr Gilbert-Smith, at your request I would consider rewriting the whole story line so there are no references to your father, mother, brother Mervyn or yourself. If I don't receive such a request from you by November the 10th I will go ahead with the publication as planned.

I would like to make my position very clear, any legal papers served in an attempt to stop or delay the printing and subsequent distribution of this book, will be both impotent and futile! The publication and distribution of this book will go ahead regardless.

Yours sincerely,

J. Affleck

P.S. If you look at the rear cover you will notice that I have removed your father's name as promised.

P.P.S. The enclosed comic page highlights your brother being arrested and then standing trial in 2010. The comic is published by the CPA (Christian Police Association) and is given to young kids in police custody and kids in young offenders institutions, as over 50% of these kids I am told, have been abused by people like your brother.
